Windsor's oldest resident, Jonathan Brewer Farnsworth, died recently at the age of 87 years. He was born in South Woodstock and was the oldest living graduate of the old academy at that place, also one of the first to graduate rom it. In 1853 he graduated from Dartmouth college and lived to become one of the oldest of the alumni of that institution. In 1856 he was admitted to the bar and continued until he laid aside professional work and lived for a few years on a farm. was born, had lived a busy life, being identified with great enterprises in the United States. He was born in 1844, educated in the common schools, Middle-bury high school and Williston academy; in a few years became assistant traffic manager of the Chicago and Northwestern railway; managed Clipper's bureau in Chicago; became a member of the Wall street bonding firm of H. C. Hollis & company in New York City; under-Wall street bonding firm of H. C. Hollis & company in New York City; undertook the work of consolidating the street lines entering Boston from the north under the name of the North being electrified in a short time; general manager of the Denver Railway Terminal system, president of two other railroads, promoter and builder of a 200-mile line from Fort Worth, Texas, and largely interested in the development of the Niagara Falls Power company. His oldest son, Henry, a Yale student, was drowned while yachting. His surviving children are Cyrus F. day, a washout occurred on the West October, 1918. River ralroad in Brattleboro, taking out about 120 feet of track. Roads were made impassable and the streets badly washed, Harold E. Akely's experience with his automobile gives an idea of the severity of the scorm. Headed from Vernon for Bruttleboro, on the first road he took he encountered a stone that veighed at least six tons, which had slid into the road, and he could not pass. He next tried to go over Hogback mountain. There be met two men who adised him to abandon any idea of going that way, as it was with the greates difficulty they had been able to cross. Taking a third road be came to a place where water from a branch of the river was running across the road. Thinking he could ford it, he continued, but the water became so deep as to flood the carburetor and the machine stopped. Stepping from the car, Mr. Akely dropped into a hole in the road, into which he sank to his shoulders. Before he could get a horse hitched to the auto. he water had put the lights out and the hauling was done with difficulty. The car was left in a nearby dooryard until next morning. It will be some days before roads in that section of th state are repaired fit for travel.
